"A new study confirms that the drug benefit being added to Medicare will provide significant help to elderly people with low incomes or very high drug costs...

...The study, issued Monday by the Kaiser Family Foundation, says that on average people who sign up for the benefit will see their out-of-pocket drug spending decline by $465, or 37 percent, from what it would otherwise have been in 2006, to $792 from $1,257."
